

Learning from the Our Museum Initiative

The Our Museum programme has supported organisational change at Belfast Exposed.

We were previously working in silos, disconnected from each other.

We have restructured, improved communications and physically brought our staff together.

Change has taken time but now our planning and programming with artists, community groups, schools and charities are all starting to join up.

At governance level, our board has been restructured and increased its skills base.

Our board values and supports our community engagement and enables us to be resilient.

We now have a better understanding of the significant role our community partners can play in programming and, indeed, our role in Northern Ireland.
